Jeffrey Roncka Joins Renaissance Strategic Advisors As Managing Partner

Arlington, VA – Aerospace and defense advisory firm Renaissance Strategic Advisors today announced the addition of Jeffrey Roncka as a Managing Partner. “Jeff represents a great addition to the RSAdvisors team. His corporate strategy and M&A due diligence expertise is a strong fit with our core service offerings, his multi-disciplinary background is an excellent cultural fit and his judgment is valued by senior executives across the global industry”, remarked Pierre Chao, Managing Partner.

Jeff offers clients 17 years of diverse experience in the national security arena. His broad background in the defense industry spans both the public and private sectors, including positions in Federal Government, investment banking, consulting, litigation support services and serving on the board of directors of a publicly traded aerospace supplier.

Jeff’s advisory experience includes serving as Senior Vice President at Global Technology Partners, LLC, a transaction advisory boutique founded by former Secretary of Defense William Perry and affiliated with the Rothschild family of investment banks, and eight years at Charles River Associates, where he led their Washington-DC defense consulting team. His Federal Government experience began with his appointment as a Presidential Management Fellow in 1995, after which he spent five years in the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition & Technology focusing on industry consolidation and missile defense.

Since leaving Government service, Jeff has participated in over sixty aerospace and defense transaction processes, representing a diverse range of US and international strategic and financial clients. He has worked on deals ranging in size from less than $5 million in enterprise value to over $4 billion. Mr. Roncka’s role on these transactions has varied, and his experience includes both buy-side and sell-side support, as well as deal structuring to accommodate non-US acquirers of cleared US companies, and antitrust clearance support.

Jeff graduated Magna Cum Laude from Harvard College with an A.B. degree in Modern European History and subsequently completed his Master’s degree in National Security Policy from The George Washington University. Mr. Roncka also completed post graduate programs at the Defense Acquisition University and at the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania.

David Scruggs, Managing Partner noted: “Seldom in this industry do you find someone with Jeff’s combination of strategy knowledge and experience. We are very excited to have Jeff as part of our firm.”

Renaissance Strategic Advisors is a Washington D.C.-based, aerospace and defense industry advisory firm focused on corporate strategy development, strategic business development services and due diligence/M&A support services. The firm works with clients across the full lifecycle – from venture start-ups to industry leaders; and up and down the value chain – from component manufacturers to prime contractors.
